As an original question of the organization of courts, as a conclusion of sound reasoning of sensible men, independently of example or imitation, the founder of an atase would ever be likely to design and it ut in operation a complication of courts like those of England. We took then cause they were ready made to our hand They were incorporated in our language. They were blended in our other imported institutions, and were part of our historic ant-cedents But they are English. They originated in an But they are English. They originated in and suited times and circumstances long ago—and are so exclusively English, that BLACKSTONE rather remarkably phrases the fact, when he says, "they were never separated in say other country in the univers." That expression is a strong one, implying that with none but Eag-lishmen would have ever become dissevered-the naturally indisorbile and industration. the naturally indissoluble and indistinguis

Eight years at wards, when we had joined the Prec Soil, or, a was then called the "Liberty Party," I went Alton as a delegate from the Fennie Armskia Association to attend a convention in that diy. I landed from the steamer, Judge Bailhacheline pany with his distinguished gross, the Hof. He Clay, met me on the levee. He greeted see warmly, saying playfully.—"I would present ye my friend, the Hon. Heary Clay, of Kentucily, that justice, in given cases, imports unity, interisibility, and completeness, and is not Law, is not Equity, but both, simultaneous and inseparable, and is applicable in all its unity and totality, to the particular litigation. That is, the foreign courts aim in their proceedings, to exhaust in the particular matter, all the justice which the law appoints or declares, in one my Ireed, the Hon. meany chay, of Acasisce, were you not a deligate to an abolition convention." The notice statesman, with a bland smile and much grace, stepped forward and said: "Let that be postatele, air; I assure you, I honor the woman, who is willing to become prominent in so unpopular a cause." I then had the pleasure of shaking hands form and as a conclusive result. to add a valuable standard work to their collections of American History.

How to wet to the State Pal

henomena of foreign law. impress is, is there such a spectacle of the ad-ministration of the law in parts and supple-ments. There is no known contrivance of ments. There is no known contrivance of courts, as with us, which will authorize on judge to do what he knows, and all men know judge to do what he knows, and all mest knows, to be a positive wrong, because there is another judge who may, or ere, in his way, set the injured party right. Yet precisely this is what frequently happens in the name of law. The Common Law judge, owing to a senseless and inexemable distribution of powers, is not allowed to hear an equitable defence, and gives judge.

an intelligent compiler to this day. The history of the Old Bay State has justly been the pride of New England. The noble qualities of its Pilgrim and Purisan founders, however, in the estimation of some, tarmined by Hilberallity and exclusiveness— their warm and strensous contentiors with the power of the Crown in vindication of their chartered rights, their bravery and enterprise in the old French wars, their heroic and unwerving patriotism during ment against the party having it, when be knows that judgment can, must and ought to be, virtually, annulled in Chancery. an A sells to R a Chicago lot, or the long struggle of the American Revolution, their later participation in the memorable events which have marked the political history of our country until the close of the war of 1812—all have thrown a lustre upon our National History not less than upon the local annals of that Commonwealth. The work, whose title we have given above, is now presented to the American public, as a complete history of that State, embodying the rich materials which modern research has brought to light, including the invaluable and long lost manuscript history of Plymouth by Gov. Bradford, whose recovery, by Mr. Barry, the author of this history, is well entitled to the commendation bestowed upon it by Mr. Everett, as a "brilliant discovery."

In examining the three volumes of this work, "canal terms," which the latter goes into pos seesion of, improves, lives on and makes a home. A. has the legal title, and B. only a bond or contract for a title, but has made the fir payments and is ready to pay the last instal ment at maturity. But A. brings an ejectment to recover possession of the lot, and in spite of B.'s equitable claim, part payment and posses-sion, will recover. Judge Wilson will instruct the jury that the equitable defence cannot goes for A., the effect of which will be to turn B. and his household out of possession. But B. may go into Chancery, and on the strength of that very equitable title, which was overruled at law, the same Judge Wilson will relieve B., against his own judgment in the other court. The boon of our beneficent and the privilege of two bills—a bill in Chancery and a bill of cests. Just such cases have Everett, as a "brilliant discovery."

In examining the three volumes of this work, one finds a spirit of historic cander and 'napartiality prevading its judgments of men and events, a pure, fresh and attractive signe of narrative, and an ingenious interweaving of detail, giving animation to its descriptions, and completeness to the picture of the times described. The minute and dis-cery and a bill of cests. Just such cases have occurred in other States, and we presume the law in Illinois is the same. Now, in plain common sense, is not such a poctacle a mockery and utterly indefensible longht any courts to be organized on distinc-ions which are not only unknown but are s tions which are not only inknown out are so growly repurant to natural and unsophistica-ted reason? Why should the law be dismem-bered and distributed into different bands, one part called Law and one part Equity, one Judge having his sphere and another Judge his, beyond which each is as impotent as a conjure outside of his charmed circle, when, in fact, th outside of its came direct, week, in fact, the exigencies of a party or a case may demand re-lief beyond the separate province of each? Why not consolidate Law and Chancery so that a defendant in a case like the one given, may plead in the original suit the facts which can now only relieve him in a second or supple-mental suit? Why not combine the functions of two jurisdictions into a single one, which shall be ample and adequate to all the interest shall be ample and accquate to an law inser-end the possible merits of any and every case? The any answer is, that robed chancellors and big wigged judges in Westminster Hall have bequeathed our institutions of law otherwise, and our fathers, their fathers, and a long ante-lant lies of fathers have been habituated. them, and we reverently accept the legacy.

Our double contrivance of courts to do that which a single system ought to do, is really no better than the supererogatory simplicity of the viscacres with the canal or of that of Dr. Barto his cais. ?

Settly appears wise folks found their river so large, it works carry a ship but would not a large; let work carry a ship but would not a large; let woon the defect their wire notices as printed. They dog a sang ditch it was notices to see specific the fact with two cais, the one great, rother made with the besides, who looks to pass through the wall.

In Illinois we duplicate our courts into both Judge and Chancellor. We contrive to dismse with one of the obvious advanta

Governor Gorman and H. M. Rice stand first on the list of candidates for the United States Senata. Gorman sakes his whede political fortune on the prize, and if the democrats have the Legislature he will either her elected as one, or defeat the election altogether. Rice, backed up by a majority of the ablest democrats in the Territory, is equally as desperate, and will consent to no compromise in which Governor Gorman is included. From here I went to Leavenworth, which is likely to become the city of the country. This place has taken the lead of all the other towns and is distancing the whole of them. The business of her merchanis counts by tens of thousands, and the number of buildings of wood, brick and stone, is the record not only of her rapid growth, but of her permanence. This is, doubtiess, the point whence will arise a large and flourishing city.

From this place I started west, and as I journeyed slowly, I had an opportunity of examining the country and of becoming acquainted with its inhabitants. We passed over rolling prairies of great beauty and fertility during the first fifty miles of our journey, and all along the way we find the country occapied by an industrious and working people, and many of them men who understand their rights and who will have them. This filling up of the country is much of it from the east, and they bring with them the experience and intelligence of News England society. We now reach the Kansan River bottom, occupied by the Pottawattomic Indians, whose reservation extends for more than thirty over the most beautiful, and the richest country I have ever seen. This beautiful country is not open to pre-emptors, but as soon as the way is made plain, the whole extent will be dotted with the cabins of the settler, and the more luxuritant mansions of the rich.

After passing this reservation the first form of note is Manhatten, situated at the junction of the Blue with the Kansas River. This is increasing, and at this time several large stone houses are in process of erection. The beauty of the scenery here, as well as the rich lands, attract the notice of every passer by.

We next strike what are denominated the will dat Hills; "these are limestone formations of fantsatic shape and of almost every variety and size, and all covered with a rich loan, and afford the choicest grazing for all kinds of stock. The time will come when this whole region will present a country of vineyards capable of su GEO. N. GRAY.

The Chivalry Arousing. At last there is a symptom of opposition in Western Virginia to the Emigration Aid Scheme of Eli Thayer. The Guyandotte Unionof publishes the proceedings of a meeting held it that place August 26th, to take into consideration Ell Thayer's and James Gordo Bennett's Emigration Sebeme. A Democrati ember of Congress elect was called upon and addressed the meeting, and one Lewis Ander-son, of Ohio, made a speech pledging the "Union and Constitution" men of Ohio, to astain the citizens of Virginia in their er eing, we presume, those of mobbing free white migrants disposed to labor with their own ands. Passing on from bence we come to Pawnee, which is a town in ruins near the gov-ernment station. This town was suppressed in consequence of its being on the reservation. We now come to Fort Riley which occupies a most commanding position, and the extensive preparations here for Uucle Sam's family ranks, and of the water power, which is the only one on this stream. The selection made by F. N. Blake, who is the resident proprietor of the town, shows him to be a man of judgment, and his continuance here is a sure guarantee of the growth and prosperity of this new town. There is here a mill of 40 horse power, doing excellent work, and the facilities now for building are such as to encourage the whole neighborhood.
